

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Introduction	1
 I The Beckett Irreducible
1 Beckett: the Reduction	7
2 Beckett: the philosophical tradition	50
3 Beckett and Sartre: the Unnamable and the pour soi	63
4 Beckett and Heidegger: being-in-the-world and the concept of angst	85
5 Beckett and Heidegger: Existence, nothingness and Being	100
 II Ionesco and the experience of wonder
6 Ionesco: claustrophobia and euphoria	131
7 Ionesco and Heidegger: authenticity and the collective	147
8 Ionesco and Heidegger: authenticity, death and the search for being	166
 III Genet's solitude
9 Genet: solitude and the Sartrean Look	195
10 Genet and Sartre: the murderer and the saint	213
11 Genet and Sartre: the image and the revolutionary	234
 IV The approach to art
12 Beckett: the task of saying nothing	261

13	Genet and the Mass: sacrament as efficacious sign	281
14	Ionesco: the free imagination	293
V Pinter and the problem of verification
15	Pinter and phenomenology: the subjective– objective synthesis	311
16	Pinter: psychological realism and the scientific approach	335
17	Pinter: the lure of objectivity	349
	Conclusion	371
	Source references	377
	Index	387