

Contents

Preface	page	vii
Acknowledgements		ix
1 Introduction		1
Orientations		1
Philosophy and methodology		3
Exploring social geography		11
2 Individual and society		20
Perception studies		21
The philosophies of meaning		25
Intersubjectivity and the geographical 'lifeworld'		31
Hermeneutics and interpretative anthropology		37
Contemporary humanism in social geography		40
3 Behaviour and agency		47
The foundations of behavioural geography		47
Rethinking behavioural geography		50
Human agency, free will and determinism		55
4 Social and spatial interaction		65
Robert E. Park and the Chicago school		65
Park's pragmatic heritage		71
The interactionist tradition		79
Chicago ethnography		86
Participant observation		93
5 Social and spatial structure		98
Interaction and social conflict: Georg Simmel		98
Spatial structure and the distribution of power: Max Weber		108
Conclusion		122
6 Structuralism		124
Lévi-Strauss and structural anthropology		126
Marxism in perspective		133
Critical theory		135

	page
Structural Marxism: Louis Althusser and Manuel Castells	142
The state and social geography	148
7 Segregation and interaction	157
The positivist tradition	158
The behaviour tradition	167
The humanist tradition	173
The structuralist tradition	178
Prospectus	185
8 Conclusions	190
Social geography and urban sociology	190
Social geography and social theory	195
Social geography and the moral basis of choice	199
Resumé	204
Bibliography	209
Index	231