1 Introduction	3
1.1 Scope of this Study	3
1.1.1 The Ordinary Notion of Information	4
1.1.2 Carriers of Information	7
1.1.3 The Convey/Contain Distinction	8
1.1.4 Information-How and Information-That	14
1.1.5 Goals of an Analysis of Information	17
1.2 Method of this Study	20
1.2.1 Semantic Ascent	20
1.2.2 Language as a Rule-Governed Activity	22
1.2.3 Evidence About Use	24
1.2.4 Description Versus Prescription	25
1.2.5 Principles Governing Analysis	28
2 Preliminary Discussion of Information	30
2.1 Information as a Process or Event	31
2.2 Tokens and Types	32
2.3 Conclusion	38

3	Information in Information Science	39
3.1	Surveys of the Literature	39
3.2	Information as a Spatio-Temporal Entity	43
3.2.1	Information as Tokens	43
3.2.2	Information as a Process or Event	45
3.3	Information Theory	50
3.3.1	Summary of Information Theory	52
3.3.2	Inadequacy of the Information Theoretic Approach	55
3.4	Information and Uncertainty	58
3.5	Other Approaches	66
3.5.1	Fairthorne	66
3.5.2	Schreider	69
3.5.3	Belkin and Robertson	71
3.6	Conclusion	74
4	Information and Propositions	75
4.1	The Propositional Approach	76
4.1.1	Propositions and Sentences	77
4.1.2	Propositions and Meaning	80
4.1.3	The Propositional Analysis of Information	84
4.1.4	Information and Meaning	94
4.2	Elaboration of the Propositional Analysis	97
4.2.1	Information Contained	98
4.2.2	Information Transferred	101
4.2.3	Information Conveyed	102
4.3	Further Questions	108
5	Basic Constraints on Informing and Misinforming	109
5.1	Saying and Telling	110
5.2	Telling and Informing	115
5.3	Conclusion	116

6 Informing, Misinforming, and Truth	118
6.1 Sentence-Complementing Terms	120
6.1.1 Entailment	121
6.1.1.1 Two Kinds of Entailment	121
6.1.1.2 Criteria of Entailment	124
6.1.2 Factives	129
6.1.2.1 Syntactic Criteria of Factivity	130
6.1.2.2 Semantic Criteria of Presupposition	133
6.1.2.3 The Factive Thesis	137
6.1.2.4 Complications	141
6.1.3 Assertives	144
6.1.4 Counter-Assertives	152
6.2 Informing and Misinforming	154
6.3 Conclusion	160
7 Informing and Believing	162
7.1 Belief on the Part of the Informant	163
7.2 Belief on the Part of the Informee	166
7.3 Conclusion	168
8 Informing, Telling, and Knowing	170
8.1 Informing and the Reliability of the Informant	171
8.2 Informing and Being in a Position to Know	176
8.2.1 Being in a Position to Know	177
8.2.2 A Necessary Condition of Informing and Misinforming	179
8.3 Analyses of 'Inform' and 'Misinform'	184
9 Informing and Information	187
9.1 The Linking Principle	187
9.2 Information, Misinformation, and Truth	191
9.3 Information and Belief	193
9.4 Information and Being in a Position to Know	195
9.5 Extending the Propositional Analysis	199

9.5.1 Information Contained	201
9.5.2 Information Transferred	204
9.5.3 Information Conveyed	206
9.5.4 Having Information	208
9.6 Conclusion	211
