

CONTENTS

Preface	page v
Notes on the Contributors	xiii
Key to Abbreviations	xv
Introduction: Chancellors and the Chancellorship
Stephen Padgett	1
The national context of executive leadership	1
The constitutional dimension	3
The political dimension	5
Coalition government	5
Chancellor-party relations	7
The politics of executive management	8
The societal context	9
Changing styles of executive leadership	11
Explaining variations in executive leadership	12
Identifying trends in executive leadership	15
Changing relations between chancellor and president	16
From 'chancellor democracy' to 'coordination democracy'?	18
Chapters
1. The Chancellor and the Constitution
David Southern	20
Historical evolution	20
The framework of government	22
The rejection of sovereignty	24
The chancellor and parliament	26
The constructive vote of no confidence	27
Dissolving the Bundestag: the chancellor constrained	29
Chancellor and government: an ambiguous relationship	31
Ministerial appointments	34
The chancellor and the federal system	35
The chancellor and the parties	36
The vice-chancellor	37
Consensus	38
The impact of the constitution on the chancellor	39
Conclusion	41

2. The Chancellor and his Party	Stephen Padgett	44
The subordination of party to chancellor: the Adenauer era, 1949-1959		46
The succession struggle		49
Erhard: a 'guest' in the CDU		52
Kiesinger and the politics of inter-party accommodation		54
Brandt as instrument of the party?		57
Uneasy coexistence: Schmidt and the SPD		62
The apotheosis of party management in the Kohl chancellorship		68
Kohl and the decline of party democracy		72
Chancellor democracy and party democracy		75
3. The Chancellor and the Executive	Roland Sturm	78
The dynamics of inner-executive relations		78
The structure of the executive		80
Constraints on executive leadership		89
The chancellor and his Finance Minister		89
Coalition government		91
Party constraints		93
The civil service		94
The dynamics of the new German polity		94
Instruments of executive management		94
Cabinet committees		95
The power of ministerial appointment		96
Informal advisers and 'kitchen cabinets'		97
Chancellor democracy or coordination democracy?		99
A redefinition of executive leadership?		102
4. The Chancellor and his Staff	Ferdinand Müller-Rommel	106
The historical evolution of the Chancellor's Office		106
Functions and organisation		108
The management of the Chancellor's Office		112
Adenauer's instruments of authority		112
Institutional degeneration under Erhard		115
Reorganisation and professionalisation: Kiesinger and Knieper		116
The emergence of the modern Chancellor's Office: Brandt and Ehmke		118
The hub of executive management under Schmidt		121

The personalisation of the Chancellor's Office under Kohl	124
Conclusion	126
5. The Chancellor and Foreign Policy
William E. Paterson	127
The role of the chancellor in foreign policy-making	128
The primacy of the chancellor in the Adenauer era	128
The assertion of the departmental principle under Erhard	132
Kiesinger and the Grand Coalition	133
The restoration of chancellor primacy under Brandt and Schmidt	134
Kohl: from shared authority to chancellor dominance	136
The chancellor and the Länder in foreign policy-making	139
The chancellors and their foreign policy	142
Adenauer's Westpolitik	142
The conflict between Gaullism and Atlanticism	144
Brandt's Ostpolitik	145
Schmidt: a foreign policy of interdependence	148
Alliance conflicts under Kohl, 1982-1989	151
The 'chancellor of unity'	152
Conclusion	156
6. The Chancellor and Organised Interests
Heidrun Abromeit	157
Organised interests and the centre of power	157
The autocrat and his advisers: Adenauer	158
Erhard as an 'old-fashioned corporatist'	163
Confrontation and cooperation: the Social Democratic chancellors	166
Kohl as 'Adenauer's grandson'?	172
Conclusion: structural asymmetry	175
7. The Changing Parameters of the Chancellorship
Gordon Smith	178
A choice of approaches	178
Adenauer and the concept of strategic change	181
Chancellors of consolidation?	182
The three 'lives' of Chancellor Kohl	185
Unification as strategic change?	188

Chancellors in post-unification Germany	190
The chancellor and the party system	190
The new 'politics of allocation'	192
Pressures on the federal structure	193
The chancellor and foreign policy	195
Chancellors in the context of their times	196
 Index	 199

TABLES

3.1.	Cabinet Government from Adenauer to Kohl	81-2
3.2.	Organisational Continuity and Change in the Cabinet	85-7
3.3.	Ministerial Membership of Cabinet Committees	96
4.1.	Heads of the Chancellor's Office	108

FIGURES

4.1.	Chancellor's Office Budget, 1950-1989 (DM)	111
4.2.	Chancellor's Office Staff, 1950-1990	111