

Contents

Acknowledgments	page vii
Chapter 1 Introduction	1
Chapter 2 What is good in itself and the theory of motivation	12
Wants and decisions	14
The sources of desires and aversions	21
The variation of values	33
Two theories about what an ideally factually informed person wants intrinsically: desire satisfaction or enjoyment	35
The appraisal of desires and enjoyments	49
Conclusions about what is intrinsically desirable	60
Chapter 3 The varieties of norms for behavior	61
Social nonmoral constraints on behavior	61
The nature of morality	66
The sources of morality	72
Information from anthropology and sociobiology	72
Information from individual psychology	83

Chapter 4	The justification of moral statements	96
	Moral systems and moral statements	96
	Universal requirements for justification of judgments of particular cases	110
	Justification of moral principles or abstract systems	113
Chapter 5	Optimal social moralities	123
	The general structure of an optimal moral code for a society	123
	The specific content of an optimal moral system	142
	What an indirect utilitarianism will recommend	145
	The place of moral rights	156
	An antiutilitarian alternative: contractualism	159
Chapter 6	Neonaturalism	164
	The coherence epistemology	167
	Criticism of antirealist positions	183
	Neonaturalism based on psychology and social history	189
Chapter 7	Utilitarianism and distributive justice	199
Chapter 8	Morally required charitable giving?	222
Chapter 9	Conscience-utilitarianism and the criminal law	237
	The statutes on crime and punishment	247
	Legal justifications	259
	Legal excuses	263
Chapter 10	Is being moral rational?	282
	The concept of self-interest	283
	What is it to act morally?	288
	The rationality of moral motivation where it conflicts with self-interest	290
Index		303