Contents

Keynote
Roger Hart ........................................................................................................... 1

Foreword
Urie Bronfenbrenner .............................................................................................. 5

How it all began – Background to this book
Dietmar Görlitz ........................................................................................................ 9

Part I Prelude and dedication

Themes in the relation between children and the city
Dietmar Görlitz ........................................................................................................ 23

Children's life worlds in urban environments
Hans Joachim Harloff, Simone Lehnert, and Cornelia Eybisch ......................... 55

Toward a functional ecology of behavior and development:
The legacy of Joachim F. Wohlwill
Harry Heft .............................................................................................................. 85

Part II Exposition of theoretical perspectives

Introduction
Günter Mey ........................................................................................................... 113

A. Levels of relationship – As they appear in different cultures

Introduction
Dietmar Görlitz ..................................................................................................... 119

A dialectical/transactional framework of social relations:
Children in secondary territories
Carol M. Werner and Irwin Altman ........................................................................ 123

Comment: Proving philosophy!?
Ute Ritterfeld ........................................................................................................ 155
B. Transactional, holistic, and relational-developmental perspectives on children in the cities

Introduction
Hans Joachim Harloff .................................................................................................................. 251

Transactionalism
Rolf Oerter .................................................................................................................................. 253

Comment: Transactionalism – What could it be?
Alfred Lang .................................................................................................................................. 267

Author's response: Is Lang going beyond?
Rolf Oerter .................................................................................................................................. 276

A holistic, developmental, systems-oriented perspective:
Child-environment relations
Seymour Wapner ........................................................................................................................ 278

Comment: Werner augmented
Dietmar Görlitz ............................................................................................................................ 301

Relational-developmental theory: A psychological perspective
Willis F. Overton .......................................................................................................................... 315

Comment: From the general to the individual or from the individual to the general?
Werner Deutsch ............................................................................................................................. 336
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Topic</th>
<th>Author(s)</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Author's response: General and individual – A relation</td>
<td>Willis F. Overton</td>
<td>342</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Integration: Dimensions of a conceptual space – But for what?</td>
<td>Hellgard Rauh</td>
<td>344</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>C. Modern versions of Barker's ecological psychology and the</td>
<td>Introduction</td>
<td>355</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>phenomenological perspective</td>
<td>Günter Mey</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Children's environments: The phenomenological approach</td>
<td>Carl F. Graumann and Lenelis Kruse</td>
<td>357</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Comment: Don't forget the subjects – An approach against</td>
<td>Katja Mruck and Günter Mey</td>
<td>370</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>environmentalism</td>
<td>Authors' response: Reading a text – A case study in perspectivity</td>
<td>380</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Carl F. Graumann and Lenelis Kruse</td>
<td>Commentators' reply: Seductive sciences</td>
<td>382</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Katja Mruck and Günter Mey</td>
<td>*Behavior settings in macroenvironments:</td>
<td>383</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Implications for the design and analysis of places</td>
<td>John L. Cotterell</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Comment: Behavior setting revitalized</td>
<td>Barbara Hinding</td>
<td>405</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Behavior settings as vehicles of children's cultivation</td>
<td>Urs Fuhrer</td>
<td>411</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Comment: Behavior settings forever!</td>
<td>Hans Joachim Harloff</td>
<td>435</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Integration: Ecological psychology and phenomenology – Their</td>
<td>Hirofumi Minami</td>
<td>442</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>commonality, differences, and interrelations</td>
<td>D. Sociobiology, attachment theory, and ecological psychology – Marching</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Marching towards the city</td>
<td>Jaan Valsiner</td>
<td>451</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Exploratory behavior, place attachment, genius loci, and</td>
<td>Heidi Keller</td>
<td>455</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>childhood concepts:</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Elements of understanding children's interactions with their</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>environments</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Comment: Gender are two
Antje Flade ................................................................................................. 469

Author's response: ... but different ones
Heidi Keller ................................................................................................... 475

Children in cities: An ethological/sociobiological approach
William R. Charlesworth ........................................................................... 476

Comment: And ethology?
Alain Legendre ........................................................................................ 504

Author's response: Adaptive variations and the individual
William R. Charlesworth ........................................................................... 512

Street traffic, children, and the extended concept of affordance as a means of shaping the environment
Wolf-D. Heine and Rainer Guski ................................................................. 514

Comment: Children as perceivers and actors –
The view from ecological realism
Christian Munz .......................................................................................... 543

Authors' response: Environmental design means the design of affordances
Wolf-D. Heine and Rainer Guski ................................................................. 551

Commentator's reply: The extended concept reconsidered
Christian Munz .......................................................................................... 554

Integration: The path to integration is not straight
Tommy Gärling ............................................................................................ 555

Reflections: What has happened in treading the path toward a psychological theory of children and their cities
Günter Mey .................................................................................................. 561

Part III The Finale

Integrating youth- and context-focused research and outreach:
A developmental contextual model
Richard M. Lerner and Alexander von Eye .................................................. 573

The young and the old in the city:
Developing intergenerational relationships in urban environments
Frieder R. Lang ............................................................................................ 598

Where we are – A discussion
Bettina Koböck interviewing Dietmar Görlitz, Hans Joachim Harloff, Günter Mey, and Jaan Valsiner .................. 629