

CONTENTS

Preface.....	9
CHAPTER ONE: Meanings in ‘La Cigale et la Fourmi’	17
CHAPTER TWO: Fables and Proverbs	25
1. Fables as vehicles of timeless truth.....	25
2. The adage and fable as figurative genres	28
3. Brevity and diversity	31
CHAPTER THREE: From Epic to Comic	35
1. La Fontaine’s models.....	35
2. Aesop, Homer and Socrates	36
3. From the epic to the comic	38
4. The epic in the Fables	42
5. The heroic beetle	44
6. Epic comedy.....	47
CHAPTER FOUR: The Fabulist as Silenus	49
1. A modest moralist	49
2. The Silenic model	50
3. Christ as Silenus.....	53
4. Rabelais, a vinous Silenus	55
5. The Fabulist as Silenus	57
CHAPTER FIVE: Words as Solid as Things	63
1. La Fontaine’s distrust of rhetoric.....	63
2. True and false voices	65
3. A true and a false voice compared	69
4. A Socratic lark	71
CHAPTER SIX: The Beginnings of Self-knowledge.....	73
1. A classical and Christian commonplace	73
2. The fable of the wallets	75
3. Moralists, poets and self-love	77

4. Self-love, ridicule and injustice	79
5. 'You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours'	82

CHAPTER SEVEN: The Self and its Reflections 85

1. Narcissus and his mirrors	85
2. 'Happy is he who learns wisdom at another's cost'	86
3. The moralist cures no one	88
4. Unchanging animals	90

CHAPTER EIGHT: A Comic Perspective 93

1. The comic context	93
2. Unflattering but good-humoured laughter	95
3. The ironist as friend	97
4. The reader as ironist	98
5. The reader as donkey, frog and hare	100
6. Hyperbolic mediocrity	103

CHAPTER NINE: Conversation and Commonplace 105

1. Conversational eloquence	105
2. 'Ethical' eloquence and comedy	106
3. The character of the 'ethical' speaker	107
4. The uses of wit and humour	109
5. Catching the ear of the public	111
6. Eloquence as warm as the sun	114

CHAPTER TEN: Living Narratives

1. Narrative and the senses	117
2. Narrative truth	120
3. Dramatic structure and character	122
4. Characters as exemplars of error	124
5. Hints of pathos	127
6. Pathos and humour	128
7. Lambs and ravening wolves	131

CHAPTER ELEVEN: Follow Nature 135

1. The philosophy of La Fontaine	135
2. Following one's own nature	139
3. The double soul	142
4. Animal and human nature	145

CHAPTER TWELVE: Desires and Fears 149

1. Reaching beyond yourself	149
---------------------------------------	-----

2. Avarice and ambition	150
3. Little men	153
4. The mean	155
5. Fears and superstitions.	158
6. Fear of death.	160
 / CHAPTER THIRTEEN: The Society of Others: Kings and Courts	 163
1. The need for society.	163
2. Kings and courts	165
3. The King.	167
4. Courtiers.	169
5. Lesser Tyrants	171
 CHAPTER FOURTEEN: On Friendship and Love	 173
1. Friendship.	173
2. Dangerous friendships	174
3. The rarity of true friendship.	175
4. Love in the Fables	177
5. A friend to oneself	179
 CHAPTER FIFTEEN: The Last Message: 'Know Thyself' again	 183
1. Busily doing good	183
2. The saint in solitude.	185
3. The natural setting	187
4. The final moral.	189
5. La Fontaine: wise man or fool?	190
 CHAPTER SIXTEEN: The Style is the Man	 193
1. A lover of truth.	193
2. A pleasant path to truth	194
3. Animals and angels	196
4. Bringing wisdom down	197
5. Fables for friends and honnêtes gens	199
 Bibliography	 201
 Index of fables.	 209
 Index	 213