

Table of contents

Table of maps and plans	XII
Table of illustrations (with permissions)	XIII
Abbreviations	XV
Acknowledgements	XVIII
 Preface	 1
A Roman province to study as ... a Roman province	2
A real religious mix	6
Religious identities and cultural confluences	8
The aim of the research	10
 Introduction. Places, Times and Method	 13
Criteria for the definition of territories	13
“ Ultima Syriarum est Palaestina ”	15
The geographical limits of the study	24
The chronology of the study according to the province’s rhythm	25
The nature of pagan cults	27
Pagan cults in the mirror of rabbinical sources	31
Numismatic sources’ contribution to history of religions	38
The status of the iconographic representations	44
 Chapter I. Ways of Romanization from 135 onwards	 49
“ Iudaea quae nunc appellatur Palaestina ”	51
The cultural role of the army from 70 onwards	53
The soldiers’ religious practices	56
An example: Beth Guvrin-Eleutheropolis	62
Civilian Influence	66
The importance of the civic framework	70
Aspects of urbanisation	72
Hellenism, a “finery”?	77

Chapter II. Jews and Polytheistic Semitic Traditions	82
The new ethnic equilibrium	82
Jews and pagans in the "Galilee of the goyim ": Sepphoris	85
Jews and pagans in the "Galilee of the goyim ": Tiberias	91
Semitic traditions in rural shrines: the cult of angels in Mambre	96
The Qedesh sanctuary on the northern frontier	104
 Chapter III. Aelia Capitolina, a little Rome	 108
A town with four names	109
The relative deletion of the Roman stratum	111
Colonial foundation and religions	116
The introduction of pagan cults	118
Castrum and colony	120
The pagan transformation of ex-Jerusalem	125
"Colonists of no faith (perfidii coloni)"	129
An approach to the topography	131
Desolation on Temple Mount	136
The colony's Capitol on Golgotha	142
Golgotha's female deity	149
An historiographic enigma	153
Other divinities of the Graeco-Roman pantheon	154
The Serapis cult	157
Aelia Capitolina's therapeutic sanctuary	160
Another water sanctuary?	168
"Check" to the damnatio memoriae	169
 Chapter IV. Pagan Cults in other Roman Colonies	 171
Caesarea Maritima, " civitas ... deliciosior et abundans omnibus "	171
A Greek, therefore pagan, city	174
Which devotions?	177
Roman ideology at the governor's seat	179
The city-goddess and the civic triad	181
Egyptian deities	184
The occasional presence of Syrian gods	186
The mithraeum	194
Pagan rituals in Caesarea	196
Religious cohabitation from the middle of the third century on	198
Flavia Neapolis	199
The god of Gerizim's "fief"	202
Sebaste, a Severan colony	209
The city of Kore in the third century	212
The Lady Kore	213

Chapter V. The περί τὰ εἰδωλα τῶν ἀνθρώπων μανία in the Greek Cities of Philistine Origin	220
Bi-cultural towns	220
Αὔξι Ἀσκαλῶν, Αὔξι Ῥώμη	222
The town where the doves were	227
ΦΑΝΗΒΑΛΟΣ	229
Gaza, the urbs gentilium	232
Marnas, theos patrios	235
“The most illustrious of all the shrines in the whole world”	241
“The other temples (τὰ ἄλλα εἰδωλεῖα)”	247
A Maiouma in Maiuma? The Panegyries	249
The weight of pagan behaviour	255
 Chapter VI. Pagan Cults in the Palestinian Cities of the Decapolis	257
Beth Shean-Scythopolis	258
A city which was not Roman	260
Dionysus ktistes	262
Insignificant Semitic influences	267
Gadara's therapeutic sanctuary	268
Hippos-Susita	273
 Chapter VII. The Nature and Future of Pagan Cults in Roman Palestine	278
The religious geography of third century Roman Palestine	279
Dominant religious trends	281
The discretion of near eastern polytheistic cults	289
The slight influence of the Jews on local pagan cults	292
A turning point in 325?	296
Pagan vigour during Julian's reign	299
Pagani qui supersunt	303
“As when the Giants overcame (τῶν Γιγάντων κεκρατηκότων)”	306
 Bibliography	311
Index of literary sources	359
Index of places	372
Index of subjects	378