

Contents

Illustrations	ix
Preface and Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	1
1. Exit-Voice Dynamics and Collective Action	14
2. Blocked Voice, Demobilization, and the Crisis of East German Communism	31
3. No Exit: The Niche Society and the Limits of Coercive Surveillance	61
4. Dona Nobis Pacem : Political Subcultures, the Church, and the Birth of Dissident Voice	81
5. Triggering Insurgent Voice: The Exiting Crisis and the Rebellion against Communism	107
6. Fight or Flight? A Statistical Evaluation of Exit-Voice Dynamics in the East German Revolution	142
7. Why Was There No “Chinese Solution” in the GDR?	165
8. Activists of the First Hour: New Forum and the Mobilization of Reformist Voice	190
9. Reunification as the Collective Exit from Socialism	224
Conclusion	254
Appendix: Quantitative Data and the Statistical Analysis of County-Level Exit and Voice Relationships	267
Notes	275
Bibliography	299
Index	325

Illustrations

Figures

1. Trends in the Number of Protesters and Emigrants: East Germany, 1989–1990 16
2. Map of the Principal Cities and Regional Administrative Districts (Bezirke) of the GDR 41
3. Exit Applicants per 10,000 Population in GDR Districts, 1988 44
4. Percentage of GDR Youth (16–24) Strongly Identifying with Marxism-Leninism, by Social Category, 1975–1988 49
5. Percentage of GDR Youth (16–24) Reporting “Full Trust” in SED Leadership, by Social Category, 1970–1989 53
6. Emigration from the GDR, 1949–1990 65
7. Religious Identification of GDR Youth, 1969–1988 85
8. Number of Emigrants from the GDR, January–October 1989 109
9. Percentage of Protesters Arrested in the Principal Cities of the GDR, October 1–8, 1989 136
10. The Shifting Balance of Exit and Voice in the GDR: Comparison of Number of Exiters to Number of Protesters, August–October 1989 137
11. Frequency Distributions of Protests and Exiters at the County Level 155
12. The Effect of Exit on Voice: Predicted Regressions Lines against Empirical Observations 162
13. Total Protest Participation in GDR Districts, September 1989–March 1990 200

14. Comparison of the Early New Forum Organization with the Occupational Structure of the GDR, September 15–November 8, 1989 213
15. Density of Early Support for New Forum by Regional District, September 15–November 8, 1989 214
16. Percentage of Vote by GDR District for Alliance for Germany Bloc, Volkskammer Elections of March 18, 1990 250
17. Exit Rate per 100 Population by GDR District, January 1989–March 1990 251

Tables

1. Selected Indicators of Development in Socialist and Nonsocialist States 34
2. Economic and Social Indicators in the Saxon Districts, East Berlin, and the GDR on Average, 1988 42
3. Security and Welfare Expenditures by Category in the GDR State Budget, 1989 68
4. Political Orientation of Youth (16–24) in the GDR by Religious Worldview in 1975 86
5. Public Opinion of Leipzig Demonstrators, November 1989–February 1990 241
- A1. Univariate Statistics and Pearson's Correlation Coefficients of the Variables in the Analysis 269
- A2. Tobit Coefficients for Regression of Protest Event Rate on Selected Independent Variables 270
- A3. Tobit Regression of Average Participation Rate on Selected Independent Variables 271
- A4. Univariate Statistics and Pearson's Correlation Coefficients of the Variables in the Analysis 273
- A5. OLS Coefficients for Regression for New Forum Mobilization Rate on Selected Independent Variables 274