

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
What is the Gothic? An analysis of the transformation of the term 'Gothic' in the eighteenth century.
CHAPTER ONE	7
'Terrorist Novel Writing': the Contemporary Reception of the Gothic
A critical survey of responses to the rise of the Gothic during the Romantic period.
CHAPTER TWO	35
'Terror and Horror': Gothic Struggles
An exploration of the sublime in Gothic literature, and an appraisal of the attendant aesthetic debates of the values of terror and horror.
CHAPTER THREE	57
'our hearths, our sepulchres': the Gothic and the French Revolution
Contextualization of the French Revolution, and its perceived impact upon the rise of the Gothic romance in Britain.
CHAPTER FOUR	74
'The sanctuary is prophaned': Religion, Nationalism and the Gothic
An exploration of the Gothic genre's perceived anti-Catholicism and attendant nationalism.

CHAPTER FIVE	97
'This narrative resembles a delirious dream': Psychoanalytical Readings of the Gothic
An appraisal of the differing psychoanalytic approaches that have been used for reading Gothic fiction.
CHAPTER SIX	125
'It is not ours to make election for ourselves': Gender and the Gothic
An analysis of the anxiety surrounding female authorship; a sample of the debate surrounding the controversial term 'Female Gothic', and an analysis of alternative approaches to reading gender in Gothic.
Conclusion	150
NOTES	152
BIBLIOGRAPHY	169
INDEX	174