

| contents

|   |      |
|---|------|
| Tables and figures  | viii |
| Chapter one: Taking transparency seriously                                      | 1    |
| Chapter two: The theory of publicity's civilising effect                        | 11   |
| Chapter three: Research design  | 40   |
| Chapter four: Dressed for politics  | 57   |
| Chapter five: Letters from backstage  | 122  |
| Chapter six: The fault of deliberative theorists which demonstrates their point | 143  |
| Appendices  |      |
| A. Comparability of private letters and public documents                        | 154  |
| B. Total sample of documents  | 155  |
| Bibliography  | 160  |
| Index   | 171  |

tables

|   |     |
|---|-----|
| Table 4.1. Preferred arguments in private meetings with civil servants  | 59  |
| Table 4.2. Preferred arguments in public speeches   | 59  |
| Table 4.3. Popularity of self-regarding arguments in private meetings and public speeches   | 60  |
| Table 4.4. Selected and rejected arguments in private meetings  | 82  |
| Table 4.5. Differences in the choices of arguments between different DGs/ministries   | 91  |
| Table 4.6. Choosing arguments for private meetings and public speech  | 106 |
| Table 5.1. The transparency effect: confidential letters in Brussels compared to publicly available letters in Stockholm                | 136 |
| Table 5.2. The publicity effect: confidential letters compared to press releases and public position papers from Brussels organisations | 136 |
| Table 5.3. Types of justifications used for different DGs   | 137 |
| Table 6.1. Results of the study with respect to the transparency and publicity effects  | 144 |
| Table 6.2. Results of the study with respect to the forum effect  | 147 |

figures

|  |     |
|--|-----|
| Figure 2.1. Publicity's civilising effect: the first step                | 20  |
| Figure 2.2. Publicity's civilising effect: the whole chain               | 23  |
| Figure 3.1. Summary of the different comparisons and the main hypotheses | 50  |
| Figure 4.1. Summary of the results of the interview study                | 116 |
| Figure 5.1. Summary of the results of the document analysis              | 139 |