

Contents

Acknowledgements	x
Introduction	xi

1 Bilingual Language Development	1
Bilingual learners	3
Simultaneous bilingual learners	3
Sequential bilingual learners	4
Child L2 learners	5
Simultaneous bilingual children: Case studies	6
Case study 1: Louis	8
Case study 2: Hildegard	8
Case study 3: Eve	9
Case study 4: Lisa and Giulia	9
Example 1.1	10
Example 1.2	10
Case study 5: Kate	11
Example 1.3	11
Example 1.4	12
Case study 6: Siri and Thomas	12
Case study 7: Manuela	12
Discussion of simultaneous bilingual children	13
Sequentially bilingual children: Case studies	14
Case study 8: Peter	14
Case study 9: Douchan	16
Case study 10: Stephen	16
Case study 11: Raivo	17
Case study 12: Hanna	17
Discussion of sequential bilingual children	18
Comparison of simultaneous and sequential bilingualism	18
Monolingual vs bilingual acquisition	19
Bilingual language corpora	21
Mental representation of the two languages of a bilingual	24
The bilingual advantage	25
Summary	29
Further reading	29

2 Theories of Bilingual Development	30
Single system and separate development hypotheses	30
Bilingual word learning: One or two lexicons?	31
Bilingual grammar	32
Example 2.1	35
Example 2.2	35
More evidence for separate development	36
Single system vs separate development in relation to sequential bilingualism	36
Universal Grammar and cross-linguistic influences	37
Universal Grammar	38
Cross-linguistic influences in bilingual development	40
Example 2.3	42
Cross-linguistic influence at the interface between two language modules	42
Universal Grammar and cross-linguistic influences in sequential bilingual development	45
The Constructivist account and the Usage-based theory	46
The Constructivist account	46
The Usage-based theory	50
Comparing the Constructivist account and the Usage-based theory	52
The Constructivist account and Usage-based theory in simultaneous and sequential bilingual acquisition	52
Summary	54
Further reading	54
3 Characteristics of the Bilingual Learner	55
Home and community language	56
Home language strategies	56
Discussion	58
Age of onset	59
Sensitive period for pronunciation	60
Sensitive period for lexical knowledge	61
Sensitive period for morpho-syntax	63
Input and exposure	64
Input frequency	66
Quality of input	67
The 'critical mass' hypothesis	70
Discussion	71
Language contact: Code-switching and mixing	71
Parental mixing	73
Child mixing versus code-switching	74
Final attainment	76
Summary	77
Further reading	77

4	Bilingual Speech Perception and Sound Development	78
	Infant speech perception	79
	Research methodologies	79
	Perception of sound contrasts, voices and languages	80
	Bilingual speech perception	81
	Bilingual phonological development	84
	Bilingual babbling	84
	Separate phonological systems	86
	Phoneme inventories of monolingual vs bilingual children	88
	Sound development in sequentially bilingual children	89
	Summary	90
	Further reading	90
5	Bilingual Lexical Development	91
	The task of word learning in monolingual and bilingual children	92
	Early lexical development in monolingual children	94
	Issues in the early lexical development of bilingual children	96
	Lexical acquisition in sequential learners	100
	Assessing vocabulary in monolingual, bilingual and sequential language learners	101
	Normative tests	101
	Assessment of simultaneous bilingual learners	104
	Assessment of sequential and early second language learners	108
	The bilingual disadvantage	109
	Monolingual and bilingual word processing	111
	Summary	113
	Further reading	114
6	Bilingual Morpho-Syntactic Development	115
	Morpho-syntactic development in monolingual children	116
	Monolingual English development	116
	Cross-linguistic development	118
	Theoretical accounts of morpheme acquisition	121
	Bilingual morpho-syntactic development	122
	Issues for simultaneous bilingual children	123
	Example 6.1	126
	Example 6.2	126
	Issues for sequentially bilingual children	127
	Assessment of grammar in different learners	129
	Normative tests	129
	Bilingual grammatical assessment	131
	Example 6.3	132
	Example 6.4	132
	The mental representation of regular and irregular morphology	134
	The Words and Rules Theory	135
	The Bybee model	135
	Studies of regular and irregular morphology in bilinguals	137

Summary	138
Further reading	138
7 Bilingual Language Processing	139
Psycholinguistic methods	139
Reaction time measurements	140
Eye fixations	142
Event-related potentials	144
The monolingual mental lexicon	145
Semantic relationships between words	146
Word access	148
Models of semantic memory	149
Models of the bilingual mental lexicon	150
Bilingual dual coding theory	151
The revised hierarchical model of lexical and conceptual representation	152
The distributed lexical/conceptual feature model	157
The shared (distributional) asymmetric model	159
The developing mental lexicon	161
Differences between simultaneous and sequential bilingual learners	163
Summary	164
Further reading	165
8 Bilingual Metalinguistic Awareness	166
Children's cognitive development	167
Piaget's account of cognitive development	167
Theory of Mind (ToM)	169
Representational re-description	171
Metalinguistic awareness and attentional control	173
The Analysis Control framework	173
Phonological awareness	174
Word awareness	176
Syntactic awareness	178
Example 8.1	178
Example 8.2	179
Example 8.3	179
A bilingual advantage in the analysis component	179
Children's development of executive functions	181
Inhibitory control	182
Working memory	182
Shifting	184
The bilingual advantage in executive function	186
Conflict resolution	186
Non-verbal working memory	187
Inhibition	188
Does the bilingual advantage extend to later learners?	189

Summary	191
Further reading	191
9 Further Directions in Studying Bilingual Learners	192
Bilingual language development	193
Bilingual catch-up	193
Offline and online tasks	196
Bilingual language processing	197
Bilingual co-activation in adults	198
Bilingual co-activation in children	199
Bilingual reading	201
Literacy development in bilingual children	202
Visual word recognition	203
Bilingual acquisition: Costs and benefits	204
Simultaneous bilingual learners	205
Sequential bilingual learners	205
Summary	206
Further reading	207
Data sources	208
Bibliography	211
Glossary of terms	223
Index	226