
Contents

List of Charts, Images, Maps, and Tables	ix
List of Abbreviations	xiii
Acknowledgements	xiv
Note on Transliteration	xvi
Introduction	1
Counterflows	1
Identities: 'Indians', 'Britons', and 'the Company', 1600 to 1857	4
Complexities of Context, Gender, Class, and Ethnicity	8
Knowledge, Representations, and Power	14
 PART I: PRE-COLONIAL AND EARLY COLONIAL RELATIONS, 1600s–1790s
1 Early Interactions: Indians, Britons, and the Company, 1600s–1750s	20
Comparative Contexts and Early Arrivals	20
From the Mughal Imperial Court to England and Back	22
Identities and Rights of Indian Merchants in Britain	29
Indian Sailors and Lascars Make the Passage	32
Indian Servants and Slaves Working in Britain	42
The First 150 Years	48
2 Indians in Britain as British Colonial Conquests Begin: 1750s–1790s	50
Early Colonial India and Britain	50
Indian Servants and Slaves	53
Indian Seamen: Lascars and Sailors	65
From Sailor to Gentleman and Back to Subaltern	71

Armenian Merchants from Bengal in London	82
Indian Envoys from the Mughal Empire	85
Representing a Would-be Ruler	90
Indian Diplomats and 'Royalty' in Britain	97
Early Effects of Colonialism	101

PART II: SETTING THE PATTERNS,

1790s–1830s

3 Indian Scholars and Teachers during Early Colonialism	103
Shifting Cultures of Colonial Rule	103
Indian Faculty at Haileybury	112
Addiscombe's Indian Professor	125
The Company's Termination of Indian Academics	131
Indian Educators in Early-Nineteenth-Century Britain	135
4 Indian Seamen and the Company	137
Patterns of Recruitment and Service of Lascars	137
The Changing Demand for Lascars	139
Lascars Prior to the Depot System	148
Establishing the Contract Depot System (1797–1813)	150
Lascar Life in London's Docklands during the Early Nineteenth Century	156
Lascars at the Heart of Controversy (1813–1816)	162
London's Docklands and the Depot (1816–1834)	172
Lascar Labour, the Company, and British Society	178
5 Crossing Identity Boundaries	180
'Natives of India' in Britain	180
Indian Wives and Children	182
Indians Claiming Nobility in Britain	189
Contested Definitions of Indian Identity	201
Boundaries and Their Limits	211
6 Indian Servants and Slaves in Early Colonial Britain	214
Indian Labour in British Domestic and Public Space	214

Company Efforts to Control Indian Servants	216
Profiling Women and Men Servants	221
Indian Servants and Slaves and British Rule	225
Emancipation and Back	232
Married and Settled	237
Service and Slavery in India and Britain	241

PART III: INDIAN COMMUNITIES DEVELOP IN BRITAIN, 1830s-1857

7 Indian Delegations Entering London	243
Indian Diplomats, Agents, and Royalty in Colonizing Britain	243
Contrasting Envoys: Eunuch and Savant	248
From Petitioner to Settler	259
Ambassadors and Royalty from Awadh	264
Missions from Satara and Jhajar	275
The Longest Among Other Envoys	281
Indian Missions to Britain	297
8 Britain as Site of Pleasure and Advancement	299
Exploring Britain's Possibilities	299
Clerk at the Board of Control	300
Pensioned Son of Tipu Sultan	304
Military Officer and Tourist	309
The Begum's Heir in High Society and Parliament, 1838-1851	318
Moving in British Society	337
9 Seeking Honours, Knowledge, Profit, and Justice	338
Anglicization as Means of Advancement	338
Parsi Officials and Students	339
North Indian Munshis and Persian Secretaries	351
Bengali Businessmen, Students, and Christians	367
Military Men	375
Improving Oneself in Britain	380

10 Indian Communities in Britain during the Decades to 1857	381
Developing Indian Social Circles and Neighbourhoods	381
London's Oriental Quarter	383
Surat's Successive Missions (1844, 1854–1857)	392
Pensioned Son of Tipu Sultan and His Servant Settler	406
The Awadh Queen Mother and Suite	411
Indian Intermediaries in London	422
Indians in British Society	428
Conclusions and Beyond 1857	431
Early Indians in Britain	431
Indians during High-colonialism and Post-colonialism	436
Bibliography	441
Index	471