

Contents

List of illustrations	vii
Acknowledgements	viii
1 Introduction: monarchy, contractualism and history	1
Monarchy and the historical imagination	1
Constitutional contract theory and the Whig tradition in eighteenth- and early nineteenth-century England	7
2 The Crown and the secular magic of petition	25
Petition and the secular divinity of 'the touch'	26
Petitioning the throne in custom and practice	29
Early murmurs of discontent: popular resistance to George III from Wilkes to Sayre	34
3 Monarchy and the policing of insanity	46
Bow Street and the security of the monarch	52
Prosecuting troublesome subjects	56
4 The madness of Margaret Nicholson	69
Treason negated: Nicholson and the familial nation	69
Some contexts: Damiens, Byng, Tyrie and Gordon	74
Madness constructed	77
Nicholson and the public	79
Nicholson and petitioning	82
5 Treason compassed: popular mobilisation and physicality in the 1790s	90
Madness, law and the levelling stone of John Frith, 1790	90
Political plots and constructive treason: the LCS, petitioning and resistance	95
'My Lord, I have been shot at!' The St James's Park riot, 1795	103
Aftermath	108
6 Lunacy and politics at fin de siècle , 1800–3	120
Cheating death twice, 15 May 1800	120

The Hadfield Act	125
An epidemic of lunatics: troublesome subjects after Hadfield, 1800–2	128
The guards' plot of 1802: Despard and king killing	134
7 The potatoes speak for themselves: regicide, radicalism and George IV, 1811–30	142
Resistance rehearsed	145
Resistance reconsidered	150
Peterloo and beyond	154
8 Collins in context: William IV, affability and the reform crisis, 1830–37	162
Affability and the citizen King	162
Politics and the patriot King	164
The case of Dennis Collins, 1832	168
9 Monarchy goes private: Peel's Protection Act and the retreat from approachability, 1837–50	177
Oxford, Francis and Bean	183
Interpretation and punishment	188
Peel's Royal Protection Act, 1842	194
The Crown and Government Security Act, 1848	198
An English queen's castle is her home: privacy, intrusion and the early Victorian monarchy	201
10 Conclusion	212
Select bibliography	217
Index	226