

Contents

Permissions	page x
Acknowledgements	xi
Preface	xiii
Introduction	1
1 On the university	18
2 On Judaism and Jewishness: A sharp critique and outstanding praise	33
3 On 'the idea of the university'	59
4 On the 'universal empire of spirit' to the 'the republics of knowledge'	76
5 On the German intellectual spirit and the modern university	87
6 On the university and democracy	103
7 On political involvement: From the Lavon affair to McCarthyism and beyond	134
8 On reshaping the university for the twenty-first century	160
9 Three historians, one conflict: Jacob Talmon, Arnold Toynbee and Menahem Begin, and the Arab–Israeli Dispute	199
Part One: Talmon and Toynbee	199
Part Two: Talmon and Menahem Begin	237
Conclusion: On Talmon and his historiography: the art of pursuing unequivocalness through duality	273
Appendix: Excerpts with emphasis added from the 'Minute by the Hon'ble T. B. Macauley, dated 2nd February 1835'	282
Bibliography	290
Index	307