CONTENTS

Illustrations xi

Acknowledgments xiii

Thomas Keith
Foreword xvii

John S. Bak
Introduction 1

Part One: Tennessee Williams and Europe

Felicia Hardison Londré
En avant! Tennessee Williams between Hyperborea and the Mediterranean 27

James M. DelPrince
“Violets & Carnations Sold on every Corner”: Tennessee Williams, Europe and Flowers 45

Henry I. Schvey
“Lightning in a Cloud”: Tennessee Williams’ Theatrical Expressionism 65

Richard Hayes
Sergei Eisenstein, Hollywood and Tennessee Williams’ “Plastic Theatre” 89
R. Barton Palmer
The View from Here and Abroad: Tennessee Williams and 1950s Hollywood Cinema

Part Two: Tennessee Williams and Europe’s Intercultural Encounters

Dirk Gindt
Williams and Bergman, Lust and Death: Culturally Translating A Streetcar Named Desire in Post-war Sweden

Alessandro Clericuzio
Tennessee Williams’ Ladies Speak Italian: Cinematic Voices on Stage and in Dubbing

Laura Torres-Zúñiga
Sea, Sun and “Quien Sabe!”: Tennessee Williams and Spain

Ramón Espejo Romero
Tennessee Williams in Spain: The Early Years (1945-1957)

Kornelia Slavova
Tennessee Williams on the Bulgarian Stage: Cold War Politics and Politics of Reception
Part Three: Tennessee Williams and Europe's Transatlantic Exchanges

David Savran
The Kindness of Strangers?: Tennessee Williams in France and Germany 259

Michael Paller
Their Date with Each Other from the Beginning: Tennessee Williams and Harold Pinter 281

Johan Callens
Tennessee Williams and Ivo van Hove at Home Abroad 301

Xavier Lemoine
Un Tramway: Warlikowski’s Desire to Reignite American Theatre in Europe 323

Michael S. D. Hooper
Pedro Almodóvar’s “Homage” to Tennessee Williams 347

Notes on Contributors 369

Index 377