

Contents

List of Illustrative Material	ix
Acknowledgements	x
Introduction	xii
Rights beyond states	xiii
'Never Again' all over again: reluctant state actors	xix
From humanitarian intervention to human protection	xxv
Overview	xxviii
Notes	xxxii
1. Atrocities and Responses	1
Why atrocities happen	3
How atrocities end	15
Implications	25
Notes	28
2. Towards Human Protection	34
Declining atrocities, rising activism	35
The international human protection regime	42
Human protection and the decline in mass violence	57
Alternative explanations	62
Conclusion	64
Notes	65
3. Protection without Force	73
The peaceful dimension of human protection	74
Peaceful protection actors	76
Peaceful measures	78
Taking stock of peaceful measures	86
Conclusion	89
Notes	91

4. Intervention in Libya	94
Countdown to Resolution 1973	95
Explaining Resolution 1973	99
Why Resolution 1973 is significant	105
Libya since Resolution 1973	107
Conclusion	115
Notes	116
5. The Problem of Regime Change	120
Historical contours	123
Sovereignty, self-determination, and human rights	124
Towards responsible protection	134
Conclusion	140
Notes	141
6. The Problem of Accountability	145
Divided counsels on Syria	147
Responsibility while protecting	151
Conclusion	161
Notes	162
7. Consistency and Complications	165
The question of consistency	166
Consequences of humanitarian intervention	171
The case for prevention	178
Conclusion	182
Notes	183
8. Human Protection in Crisis?	187
The crisis of human protection	188
A crisis explained	196
Can human protection survive?	201
Conclusion	206
Notes	207
Bibliography	210
Index	228