

Table of contents

List of figures	iv
Abbreviations	v
Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction	1
Research question	2
Rationale	3
State of research	5
Analytical framework	10
Sources	15
Structure	16
1 Building a Hospital (ca. 1925 to 1930)	20
The Basel Mission in the Gold Coast and its early medical work	21
Independent Church and Scottish Mission	23
Resuming medical work	31
The site: Agogo	38
Rural health care in the Gold Coast	46
The building	49
Inauguration and operation	54
Conclusion	57
2 Expansion and technical supremacy (ca. 1930 to 1940)	59
Heal the sick who are there and tell them: ‘The Kingdom of God is near’	59
Doctors, Sisters, Auxiliaries, Nurses, Dispensers	66
The colonial health care system and the Great Depression	73
Agogo and the hospital	83
Economic constraints and technical supremacy	94
The five-fold problem	107
Missionary and clinical views of traditional medicine	111
“Outpost of German science” and a “cloak for Nazi activity”	118

TABLE OF CONTENTS

War	126
Conclusion	131
3 Re-opening and re-orientation (ca. 1945 to 1955)	133
Health care between development and real politics	134
Temporary re-opening	139
Again: Technical Hegemony	149
Mission medicine in the late colonial Gold Coast	162
Expansion beyond Agogo	167
Re-orientation in Agogo	171
Conclusion	174
4 The tuberculosis resort (ca. 1950 to 1965)	177
Early tuberculosis measures in the Gold Coast	177
“‘Davos’ of the Gold Coast”	180
Tuberculosis Services in the late colonial Gold Coast	188
A tuberculosis hospital	190
Ghana, the WHO, and BCG	194
Thorax surgery in Agogo	198
Conclusion	201
5 Nursing, Christian devotion, and development cooperation (ca. 1950 to 1970)	204
British Sisters, Ghanaian nurses, and rural health care	204
The British model and its limits	208
Christian Lebensgemeinschaft	213
Swiss development cooperation in independent Ghana	224
Consolidation of nurses’ training in Agogo	232
Conclusion	244
6 Collaboration, dependency, integration (ca. 1955 to 1980)	247
Mission medicine and public health in Agogo	248
Christian values and spiritual healing	255
Autonomous mission medicine in independent Ghana	261
Basic health care and development plans	274
Financial dependencies	282

TABLE OF CONTENTS

From basic health care to primary health care	290
Under fives' clinics and family planning	294
Church hospitals, district health, and nurses' training	300
Hospital medicine and Primary health care in Agogo	310
Conclusion	314
Concluding remarks	317
Legacy	317
Mission hospitals and institutional resistance	319
Health care concepts and practices	323
Limitations	329
Sources	332
Basel Mission Archive, Basel	332
Schweizerisches Bundesarchiv/Swiss Federal Archives, Bern	333
Public Records and Archives Administration Department (PRAAD), Accra	333
Ashanti Regional Branch of PRAAD, Kumasi:	334
Archive of Manhyia Palace, Kumasi	334
Other institutions	334
Newspaper articles	335
Internet	335
Interviews	336
Bibliography	337