

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Contributors	viii
Abbreviations	x
Illustrations	xi
Introduction (Mary Jane Edwards)	xiii
Chapter 1: Writing on the Raj: Bentley and British India (Nirmolini Velma Flora)	1
Chapter 2: “Opportune as Well as Interesting”: Bentley and South Africa (Valerie Letcher)	35
Chapter 3: “The Land of the South”: Bentley and Australasian Travel Writing (Helen Hewson)	63
Chapter 4: “That’s Bentley. He is the Only Patron Worth Havin’”: Richard Bentley Meets Sam Slick (George L. Parker)	87
Chapter 5: “My Dear Mr Bentley”: Richard Bentley and Susanna Strickland Moodie Correspond (Mary Jane Edwards)	115
Chapter 6: Changing Literary Tastes and the Blue Pencil: Bentley’s In-House Revision and Abridgement of Australian Colonial Novels (Paul Eggert)	141
Chapter 7: More Than a Case of “Comparative Failure”: The Story Behind the Premature Bentley Ventures of Ada Cambridge (Elizabeth Morrison)	169

Chapter 8: Fostering a Colonial Author: George Bentley and Rosa Praed (Chris Tiffin)	201
Chapter 9: Selling Books to the Colonials: Advertising and Distributing Bentley Books in Nineteenth-Century Australia (Wallace Kirsop)	223
Chapter 10: Bentley in the Brancepeth Library: Books, Readers, and Reception (Lydia Wevers)	245
Conclusion (Elizabeth Webby)	263
Works Cited	267
Index	285