Photos

|-----|--|-----|
| 1.1 | Depending on the current state of politics, government sometimes changes what it does and what it does not do.   | 5   |
| 3.1 | Photographs such as this one, which became known as “Migrant Mother,” by photographers working for New Deal agencies, both reflected the need for New Deal programs and provided political support for a continued and strong federal government role in relief.   | 85  |
| 3.2 | The Social Security Act was a New Deal program that helped protect retirees from poverty.  | 86  |
| 3.3 | This sign, at a bus station in Rome, Georgia, is emblematic of the forms of discrimination against African Americans that prevailed under Jim Crow laws.   | 101 |
| 3.4 | 1963 March on Washington. A view of over 200,000 marchers along the Capitol Mall, August 28, 1963.   | 103 |
| 4.1 | The U.S. Capitol building. Why has this building come to symbolize the whole of the U.S. government?   | 118 |
| 5.1 | Individuals in the United States may protest actions of government, industries, or other people. From what you see here, do these individuals belong to any formally organized or informal interest groups? What is being expressed with their signs?  | 175 |
| 6.1 | E-Scooter share programs are becoming increasingly popular in many U.S. cities.  | 208 |
| 7.1 | A storefront displaying a sign indicating that Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, or S.N.A.P., benefits are accepted there. This is an example of a “redistributive” policy and, as such, is accompanied by fierce political debates over these policies’ desirability. Why do you think this is so? | 265 |
| 9.1 | A Transportation Security Administration agent performing a scan on a passenger. Do you think our system of aviation security was designed through careful policy analysis? Or as a result of persuasive appeals to “do something” after the September 11 attacks? Or both, or other reasons?                | 319 |
