
Contents

Acknowledgments vii

List of Abbreviations xi

Introduction 1

1. Placement and displacement 12

Rank and file: Opera's everyday biographies 15

The situation of new opera in the postwar repertoire 23

2. The significance of nonsense: Boris Blacher's Abstrakte Oper Nr. 1 38

Why abstract an opera? 40

Linguistic abstraction in the libretto 43

Making music from nonsense 49

Hearing controversy and politics in abstraction 59

3. Italy, atonally: Hans Werner Henze's König Hirsch 70

The bondage of bel canto 71

The magic of König Hirsch 77

From sketches to songs 80

Melody, the "renegade's hara-kiri" 97

4. The opera underneath: Carl Orff's Oedipus der Tyrann 101

Origin stories I: Ancient Greece in Germany 105

Origin stories II: Ancient Greece against the opera 108

An opera without music? 112

Traces of the opera underneath 118

5. Explosive pluralisms: Bernd Alois Zimmermann's Die Soldaten	137
Wagner and Berg: Zimmermann's operatic pasts	138
A spaceship of the mind: Zimmermann's operatic futures	141
From Lenz to Literaturoper	145
The structure of pluralism	150
Serialism and expression(ism)	164
In the end	171
6. Rebuilding and retrenchment: The Munich Nationaltheater and Werner Egk's
Die Verlobung in San Domingo	174
Ideas of reconstruction	176
The reconstruction of the Munich Nationaltheater	181
November 1963: The gala reopening	189
Who was Werner Egk?	195
Operaticism and racial stereotypes in Die Verlobung in San Domingo	197
Epilogue	213
NOTES	219
BIBLIOGRAPHY	265
INDEX	283