

Contents

List of Figures	ix
Preface	xi
Acknowledgments	xiv

PART I

Kennedy and the Anti-Cuban Policy After the October Crisis	1
1 Influential Factors of the U.S. Policy Toward Cuba in 1963	3
2 The New Governing Body for Anti-Cuban Subversion	11
3 Proposals from the Coordinator of Cuban Affairs	18
4 Soviet Troops in Cuba and the Political Debate in the U.S.	31
5 “Uncontrolled” Terrorist Acts of the Counterrevolution	38

PART II

The “Multiple Path” Policy	47
6 The Internal Counterrevolutionary “Offensive” in the Beginning of 1963	51
7 The Standing Group and the Political Alternatives	58
8 The Integrated Covert Action Program	73
9 Operations and “Autonomous” Groups	83

PART III

The Cuban-Soviet Dispute and the Reinforcement of the Cuban Defense 91

10 The Cuban-Soviet Dispute and the First Visit of Fidel Castro to the Soviet Union 93

11 Military Reinforcement of the FAR Between 1963
and 1964 111

12 The Confrontation With the Internal Counterrevolution 118

13 The Action Against the Internal Counterrevolution and Its Groups 125

PART IV

The Ambivalence of the "Multiple Path" Policy 135

14 The Negotiations of Lawyer James B. Donovan and the Ambivalent Policy Toward Cuba 137

15 Attempts to Approach the Cuban Government 149

Appendix: Chronology of U.S.-Cuba Relations, 1963 168

Index 196