

CONTENTS

1	US Historical Fiction Since 2000 Ruth Maxey	1
Part I Imagining 19th-century America in Recent Historical Fiction
2	Folklore, Fakelore, and the History of the Dream: James McBride's Song Yet Sung Judie Newman	17
3	To "Refract Time": The Magical History of Colson Whitehead's The Underground Railroad Michael Docherty	33
4	Growing Up Too Quickly: The Cultural Construction of Children in Lyndsay Faye's Gods of Gotham Trilogy James Peacock	53
5	"Everyone, We Are Dead!": (Hi)story and Power in George Saunders' Lincoln in the Bardo Clare Hayes-Brady	73

Part II Representations of the 20th-Century United States

- |    |   |     |
|----|---|-----|
| 6  | “We Cannot Create”: The Limits of History in Joyce Carol Oates’s The AccursedRachael McLennan   | 95  |
| 7  | “Key Clacks and Bell Dings and Slamming Platens”: The Historical and Narrative Function of Music in E. L. Doctorow’s Homer and LangleyVilly Karagouni | 111 |
| 8  | Archive Future: Trauma and the Child in Two Contemporary American BestsellersAimee Pozorski  | 129 |
| 9  | Creating a Usable Past: Writing the Korean War in Contemporary American FictionRuth Maxey  | 149 |
| 10 | Paternity, History, and Misrepresentation in Viet Thanh Nguyen’s The SympathizerDebra Shostak   | 171 |
| 11 | Queering the “Lost Year”: Transcription and the Lesbian Continuum in Susan Choi’s American WomanRebecca Martin  | 191 |
| 12 | The Contemporary Sixties Novel: Post-postmodernism and Historiographic MetafictionMark West  | 209 |
| 13 | “What’s the Plot, Man?”: Alternate History and the Sense of an Ending in David Means’ HystopiaDiletta De Cristofaro                                   | 229 |

14	“To Avenging My People”: Speculating Revenge for US Slavery in Dwayne Alexander Smith’s Forty Acres DeLisa D. Hawkes	245
	Index	265