

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Introduction	1
1. Persuasion, Pleasure, Counterpublics	11
Experience and Counterpublics	15
Whatever Happened to Reality?	20
Rhetoric, Persuasion and Pedagogy	29
Desire and Pleasure	33
2. Counter-History in British Independent Film and Video	41
Problems with the Past: On Radical Historiography	45
Diggers, Levellers and Bertolt Brecht	49
Work and Welfare: The Women's Movement in Britain	55
National Pasts, Heritage, Ethnicities and Television	60
3. The Independent Filmmakers' Association (1974–90)	71
Whose Public? The IFA and the Annan Committee	73
Reading Counterpublics: The IFA Newsletter and Other Publications	80
Forming New Publics for Independent Film and Video	85
Collective Bodies and Reading Publics	93
4. Counter-Television: Marc Karlin's For Memory	103
The Image in Crisis: Testimonies and Witnesses	109
Images Archived: Holocaust and the Strange Museum	114
Images, Bodies, Communities	118
Image-Publics and Counter-Television	122
5. Bodies, Voices and Counterpublics: Stuart Marshall's Bright Eyes	129
Bodies as Images	131
Moving Images: AIDS on Television in Britain	136
The Witness's Voice	139
Sound and Voice	143
Signifying Practice and Counter-Television	147
Conclusion	156
References	161
Index	178