

CONTENTS

---

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS	iii
GENERAL INTRODUCTION
John Clark, Maurizio Peleggi, and T.K. Sabapathy	I
I DISCRIMINATING THE “PUBLIC”: PROCESSES OF RECEPTION AND ARTISTIC CREATION IN A SITUATION OF MODERNITY
1 Tribal Art and Its Incorporation into Contemporary Art Robert Jahnke	9
2 First Steps to Modernity: The Javanese Painter Raden Saleh (1811–1880) Werner Kraus	29
3 “A Piece of History”: Juan Luna’s Parisian Life and the Production of Property Patrick D. Flores	56
4 Painting the Nanyang’s “Public”: Notes towards a Reassessment Kevin Chua	72
5 The Emergence of a Mass Audience for Modern Art in Japan Omuka Toshiharu	94
COMMENTARY ON PART I T.K. Sabapathy	111
II CONTEMPORARY DILEMMAS: BETWEEN A “PUBLIC ART” AND POSITIONING ARTISTIC PRACTICE
6 Selling Space: Socialism and Signage in Phnom Penh after the Khmer Rouge Ingrid Muan	117

ii • EYE OF THE BEHOLDER

7	Garlands of Love: Socialist Realist Aesthetics in Singapore Ray Langenbach	129
8	More Trouble than it is Worth: What Can We Expect from Public Art in Singapore? Peter Schoppert	150
9	Everyday Life and Imaginaries of the Modern Charles Merewether	170
10	Performance Art and Its Constraints Thomas Berghuis	186
	COMMENTARY ON PART II Maurizio Peleggi	215
III	BETWEEN THE INTERNATIONAL AND NATIONAL PUBLICS FOR ART
11	Cultural Transformations in the Asia-Pacific: The Asia-Pacific Triennial and the Fukuoka Triennale Compared Caroline Turner	221
12	Cartographies of the Future: The Asia-Pacific Triennials and the Curatorial Imaginary Francis Maravillas	244
13	Post Doi Moi International Reception of Vietnamese Contemporary Art Boi Tran Huynh	271
	COMMENTARY ON PART III John Clark	288
IV	CONCLUSION
14	What Modern and Contemporary Asian Art Is [or Is Not]: The View from MoMA and the View from Asia John Clark	295
	APPENDIX	318
	LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS	321