

CONTENTS

Contributors	vii
Introduction: synaesthesia and the ancient senses Shane Butler and Alex Purves	1
1. Why are there nine Muses? James I. Porter	9
2. Haptic Herodotus Alex Purves	27
3. The understanding ear: synaesthesia, paraesthesia and talking animals Mark Payne	43
4. Aristophanes, Cratinus and the smell of comedy Mario Telò	53
5. “Looking mustard”: Greek popular epistemology and the meaning of δρμύς Ashley Clements	71
6. Plato, beauty and “philosophical synaesthesia” Ralph M. Rosen	89
7. Manilius’ cosmos of the senses Katharina Volk	103
8. Reading death and the senses in Lucan and Lucretius Brian Walters	115

9.	Colour as synaesthetic experience in antiquity Mark Bradley	127
10.	Blinded by the light: oratorical clarity and poetic obscurity in Quintilian Curtis Dozier	141
11.	The sense of a poem: Ovids Banquet of Sense (1595) Sean Keilen	155
12.	Saussure's anaphonie : sounds asunder Joshua T. Katz	167
13.	Beyond Narcissus Shane Butler	185
	Bibliography	201
	Index	221